

Oppdalsril

(NORWAY)

Oppdalsril (OHP-dahls-REEL), a dance for three people, comes from Oppdal in Sør-Trøndelag region of Norway. "Ril" translates to "reel" and such dances are considered to be quite old in Norway. Most often they are found along the southern coast of the country, but Oppdal is in central Norway. As in many threesome dances, the two women vie for the man's attention and are not particularly pleased with each other. Considerable play-acting among the three dancers is desirable - women always smile at the man, but frown, scowl, or make faces at the other woman, and the man divides his attention equally between the two women. Alix Cordray, resident of Oslo, Norway, presented the dance at the 1986 University of the Pacific Folk Dance Camp. The dance is described in Norske Folkedansar II, by Klara Semb, published by Noregs Boklag, Oslo 1975.
