

SLOVENIAN WALTZ

(Slovenian)

This Slovenian Waltz is composed of different authentic figures put together in a fixed sequence. Slovenia shares with near neighbor Austria an Alpine culture, and for many years was actually a part of the Austro-Hungarian Empire. It's not strange, then, that there should be similarities in the dances of the two countries. The Slovenes, however, unlike the Austrians, always accent the first beat of their waltzes or laendlers, and give them more of a bouncy flavor. This dance was introduced by Dick Crum and has since become popular with many folk dance groups. It was first taught in California in the summer of 1955.
