

Stav Lavan (Israel)

Stav Lavan (STAHV lah-VAHN) is a couple dance by Shlomo Maman to music by S. Lavi. The title means "White Autumn" and the feeling of the dance is of the calm beauty brought by a rare light snow in Israel. It compares a nice relationship of dance partners to that between man and nature in this delightful mood. It was presented at the 1983 University of the Pacific Folk Dance Camp in Stockton by Ya'akov Eden.

MUSIC: Cassette Tape "Dance with Moshe Pinkas" Side B/6 3/4 meter

FORMATION: Cpls at random about the floor facing LOD, M to L of ptr with inside hands joined in "V" pos and outside hands down at sides.

STEPS and STYLING: Although the meter is 3/4, the steps have an "up-down" feeling as befits the beauty of Autumn. M and W are on opp ft thruout the dance; ftwk for M is described, W dance the counterpart. This is a dance of affection, so eye contact with ptr is essential.
